

Traveling to Arizona?

We are doing what we can to minimize travelers' confusion and taking steps to inform them that questions regarding citizenship or lawful presence in the United States will only be asked as a result of a violation of Arizona state law and only then if there is reasonable suspicion that a person is in the U.S. illegally.

We also understand many travelers want to know what is considered to be acceptable forms of identification for proof of lawful presence in the United States. Below is a list of acceptable identification. Most states, including Arizona, require verification of lawful presence to receive a driver's license. Therefore, in most cases a driver's license is sufficient to establish lawful presence.

Below is a list of acceptable identification:

1. A valid tribal enrollment card or other form of tribal identification
2. If the entity requires proof of legal presence in the U.S. before issuance, any valid U.S. federal, state or local government issued identification.
  - A U.S. Government or state Identification Card* (i.e. driver's license)
  - U.S. Passport
  - Military Dependent Identification Card
  - Visa
  - Green Card
  - Birth Certificate

*There are states that issue a driver's license without proof of legal presence: New Mexico, Illinois and Utah. Travelers should check with their state's Motor Vehicle Divisions to determine if their state's driver's license requires proof of legal presence in the United States.
